

The functionality of a screen is implemented within its `parseMessage()` function.

Image drawing is accomplished in a recursive fashion, where child screens send their current images to their parent screen to be composed together. Optimization is possible using a modification check to update only changed areas in image composite.